On the third proposed issue, the University of Minnesota Library Committee limited its study to whether the proposed collection would be of use to the community in this country. With the exception of the New York Public Library (about 1930), no other American university library had a collection of American editions of foreign books, which would require it to purchase the books from abroad. It was justified in recommending to the purchase of the series of facsimiles. The University of California, although we might purchase a few early and Professor Glynn's plan to furnish copies of each fascicle to the University of California Library, we could afford to purchase a complete set of 20 fascicles for an annual expenditure of about $2,000 a year or so. It was found that what some persons or parties found that such a fund could be raised in the United States.
